But for the government, it's a failure on health care policy. Our NHS is in crisis. Under David Cameron, the NHS is set to be the first casualty of a shrinking state. And even though 90% of the NHS budget has not been cut, a small corner of the NHS has been. So I had a talk with the doctors who are trying to save the NHS from the budget cuts. And even though they're real doctors, no-one would want to meet them. Read more: NHS 'needs to be rethought' - top doctors at root of NHS crisis You see, in the NHS everything is secret. And because they're not allowed to speak on the record, when I spoke to them, they couldn't. So I went with them in the backroom where no-one could hear. They were being threatened with a redundancy notice if they spoke to me. Despite taking a chance and coming up with a plan to introduce plain packaging, the NHS is going to be slashed. Read more: Labour is backing the NHS. But are we really? The NHS was promised that things would get safer. We were promised that many areas of the NHS would be commissioned from GPs to be delivered in a 'new way' – so that local communities and local NHS organisations have better access. We were promised that many GP practices would be delivered in a 'community health partnership' – so that they can be delivered more cost-effectively. We were promised that we'd be given more information – so that we can better understand the NHS. And we were promised more focus on social care. But as the GPs I met with showed me, all we got was more redundancy notices.

And they told me that the only way to stop the cuts is to stand up and fight. Before our talk was over, they told me they�
